

Antwerp, in the heart of Europe

By train

Antwerp is located in the heart of Europe. From European capitals such as Brussels, Paris and Amsterdam and from Germany there are direct train connections to the city centre. There is also a connection to St. Pancras in London via Brussels.

Excellent connection to Brussels Airport

Are you travelling by plane to Belgium? Antwerp has an excellent connection with Brussels International Airport, where flights from more than 170 international destinations arrive. Get on the train in Brussels Airport and a mere 40 minutes later you'll arrive in Antwerp's Central Station.
Or make use of Antwerp Airport, only 4 km away from the city centre. This small and comfortable airport has connections with various European and North African destinations.

By road

Various bus operators, like Eurolines and Flixbus, offer international connections between a number of European cities and Antwerp. Of course you can also drive your car to Antwerp.
It's important to know that Antwerp's city centre is a low-emission zone (https://www.slimnaarantwerpen.be/en/LEZ).

Tip: check the route planner of Smart Ways to Antwerp for all accessibility information and smart alternatives for reaching the city.
https://www.slimnaarantwerpen.be/en/home